CAPTAIN HUMBERT WRITES OF CATTLE

Editor The Advertiser:

I want to make an apology to Mr. J. D. W. Watts for leaving the meeting in the court house Saturday afternoon before the exercises closed. I had to arrange some business and meet an engagement to leave Laurens at 4:30. We had good, plain, practical addresses, containing as much information as the average man could digest.

The question presents itself to my mind—will the farmers follow the advice given. If so, then I wish to say a word in behalf of the kind of cattle you should select. If you are convenient to market and prefer the Dairy business then you should purchase Jerseys or Guernseys. If you want a dual purpose cow, then I would suggest Ayrshires. But should you decide to raise beef cattle you have three types from which to select. If you have heavy pasturage and plenty of feed, you can breed the Shorthorn or Red Poll. But for short range and ordinary treatment, I prefer the Aberdeen Angus cattle to the Herefords. I think they are more hardy, being short legged, square built, blocky, and fatten at any age. I have been breeding them for three years, and like them. They are solid black color. I have a fine bull that I am crossing on Jersey cows. He knocks the horns off and stamps his color on every calf. If you handle the Hereford, then you must dehorn them when many are bunched together, which is a painful and cruel operation. The animal usually shrivel from the effect of it, and the result is an ugly animal. You can't improve on nature. Every man has his preference, and I say, select the kind you like best, the kind you like to show your neighbors, the kind you like to handle, and stay by it. There is no royal road to success, it means work.

When you get to the butchers block, the Angus will give you more beef in choice cuts than any other breed. The average net weight is about sixty five per cent of the gross weight. They have been bred for centuries in Scotland, but only recently introduced into the United States. The first Angus cow was imported in 1850, but they did not attract much attention until after the Paris Exposition in 1878, when they swept off the premiums for the fat steer and car load lots. One steer weighing 2500 lbs was purchased by a western buyer, and shipped to Kansas City at a cost of $400, by express, to be in time for the show. The steer shrank 130 pounds, and I don't remember about the premium, but when he was slaughtered a few years later, he netted 71.3 per cent of gross weight, which was the highest per centage claimed by anyone. In all the stock shows of the west, Fort Worth, Denver, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Sioux and Chicago they have taken a large majority of the premiums offered for grand champion single steer and grand champion fat, car load lots. The Aberdeen Angus invariably hangs up a well proportioned carcass, which shows a large proportion of lean meat, with just enough fat interspersed to give proper flavor and juiciness. The carcass is invariably characterized by compactness, smoothness, and fineness of bone—attributes which are constantly sought by the butcher. "The Angus bullock fattens or ripens at any age, and is always free from that exterior gobs of fat, which is known in beef house circles as soap stock." The place to sell cattle is at the barn. After you get them fat, you can't drive them eight or ten miles without loss, much less twenty-five or thirty miles. Last spring, I sold a few head to a butcher at Honea Path, and he hauled them over in wagons. He reported to me that these half breed netted 60 per cent of their gross weight. But they were fine and topped the market.

Now as to in-breeding, if you have a perfect bull as to type and make you can cross him on his own heifers once, without any injury. I am doing so successfully. In raising cattle, don't let the calf get stunted, keep it growing and you will succeed in making a fine animal. One of the main objects in feeding or raising cattle is to enrich your farm. A ton of compost made from an animal fed on a balanced ration, kept under shelter until applied to the soil, it is hard to estimate the value of it. It puts new life into the soil, it is home of bacteria that livens up the soil and makes available the hidden plant food of the soil. It adds humus, the store house of moisture, and will show its effect for several years.

As to feeding beef cattle this winter, I would go slow unless one has plenty of feed in sight, or can arrange with the oil mills for meal and hulls at reasonable prices. Several years ago, I fed a car load of cattle. Certain parties were to furnish hulls at $4.00 per ton and meal at $20.00 or $22.00, but during the season, hulls became scarce and could be had only in limited quantities at $10.00 per ton. The result was that I lost by my investment.

Now a word to the young men of the county. Stay on the farm, be your own boss, be a free man, don't sacrifice your manhood for a paltry sum, be a man of truth, honor, and integrity. Let your word be your bond, build character, which is worth more to your country than silver or gold. The merchant, banker, lawyer, or doctor who sits down in ease and does nothing won't succeed, nor will the idle farmer. Your time is your capital, and when properly occupied, will give sure return. Any young man in Laurens county that is industrious, honest, and economical, and will take care of what he makes, can purchase a home and live in ease.

With kindest regards to the farmers and wishing you success,
Yours truly,
J. B. Humbert.

The Sign's Request.

Many a jest has been extracted from signs by persons who do not otherwise believe in them. But usually the wit belongs to the observer, and the sign is merely a silent and painfully unaware victim of the end to which it is put. "Occasionally, however, the sign asserts itself. There is one sign along the west bank of the Hudson that is almost Olympian in its satire. On one hand is the lapping river, while upward, on the other, tower the Palisades. At the foot of that threatening mass of rocks are a few boulders—each a ton or so in weight—which have broken loose. The sign reads: "Please Do Not Roll Stones Here."

CABBAGE STORING IS SIMPLE

Cheaply Constructed Bank or Hillside Root Cellar is Only Shelter Needed—Keep Place Cool.

(By K. A. KIRKPATRICK, Minnesota Experiment Station.)

Cabbage storing is rather simple and easy. The shrinkage is small. A cheaply constructed bank or hillside root cellar, or a basement under almost any farm building, is the only storehouse necessary. This should not be too dry and should be a place which could be kept at a temperature of about 40 or 50 degrees in the early part of the season. This is often accomplished by opening the doors to let in the cool night air and closing them to keep out the warmer air during the remainder of the day. Later, of course, the doors must be kept closed continuously.

In storing, most growers place the heads in a cellar with all leaves and roots attached. Many market gardeners have a better plan. They cut off the stalk as though preparing the heads for market, but leave two or three rough leaves to protect the more tender parts. They then pack in ordinary cabbage crates and rack these crates up, leaving a gangway every third or fourth tier for air circulation.

This work is not particularly difficult, and will certainly pay the grower well if it increases the selling price of his production eight or tenfold. For the last few years, it has been marketed and harvested at from $5 to $7.50 a ton. The purchaser has stored it and sold it during the late winter for $50 or $60 a ton.

Queen or Dairy Maid Ambition the Same

In the expectant mother's mind there is no limit to what the future has in store.

and yet during the period of expectancy, much depends upon the physical comfort of the mother. One of the best aids is a remedy known as "Mother's Friend." Applied over the muscles, it penetrates to the net work of nerves, relieves the pains incident to stretching of cords and ligaments, makes them pliant, induces daily comfort, restful nights, a calm mind and pleasant anticipation. You use it with your own hand, apply it as needed, and at once feel a sense of relief.

Mothers who have learned all this from experience tell of the blessed relief from morning sickness, the absence of strain and the undoubted healthful influence imparted to the coming baby. Get a bottle of this splendid help today. Phone your nearest druggist or send for it. Then write Bradford Regulator Co., 401 Lamar Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for a valuable book of instruction for expectant mothers. "Mother's Friend" is recommended everywhere by women who have used it. And you can read some very interesting letters if you write for this book.
